2 police officers face punishment

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

One Romulus police officer has been terminated and another reprimanded for their roles in the accidental shooting of a Pontiac officer, officials said.

The officers, whom police declined to name because of a department policy protecting their identities, said that one probationary officer was terminated following a formal hearing March 3 and another will be officially reprimanded.

No criminal charges were filed, Romulus Inspector John Lewis said, because the Pontiac officer declined to file charges against the two officers.

"Basically, we followed the rules and regulations set forth in our official policy," Lewis said Tuesday. "We tried to be impartial and decide the case on its own merit. As a result, the city decided to remove one officer and reprimand the other."

Lewis said that he expected the officer who was reprimanded to file an appeal with the Romulus Police Officers Association. Under the terms of the union contract, the probationary officer has no appeal rights. Ron Huggins, president of the union, was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

That officer has been a member of the Romulus Police Department for four years. The probationary officer had been a police officer in the city for only six months, Lewis said.

Both were suspended without pay pending an official investigation into the Feb. 5 incident. Both had filed grievances with the union challenging

Low voter count sets millage rate

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

School voters approved by a slim margin a 33.5-operating renewal mill while rejecting a bid by the district to renew a 1.5 mill tax levy for maintenance. The low voter turnout apparently helped pass the operating mill, school officials said.

The 1.5-mill maintenance tax will probably be placed back on the ballot during the June election for school board members, they added.

Voters said yes to renewing the operating mill by 600-586 while delivering a no vote on the school maintenance mill by a mere 17 votes, or 580-597.

Total voter turnout was 1,186 for operations and 1,177 for maintenance.

The low turnout was attributed to the lack of issues in the March 4 Special Election. Superintendent of Schools William Bedell added that the lack of visible maintenance improvements discouraged voters from approving a renewal millage.

"I think the unfortunate thing is that we've had to spend the bulk of our money to replace roofs on our school buildings," he said. "As a result,

Second time around Student aces spelling bee

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

She knew she could do it, but it was still a chore to memorize the spelling of more than 100 words. After all, seventh-grader Kim Lewis, 12, had been through the rigors of spelling bees before.

Last year, Lewis, then a sixth-grader, won the Merriam Elementary School spelling bee, cancelling the dream of other young hopefuls to participate in the regional spelling match.

Again, this year, much to her delight, Lewis held out to the very end with, not surprisingly, the word "physical," a fitting testimony to her ability to endure the pressures of competing with kids older (and whom she thought better) than her in spelling ability.

"I'm really excited," she admitted recently. "I've never missed one word on my spelling tests this year but I was still surprised I won."

Yet to go is the regional spelling bee today at Savage Road Elementary in Belleville. As these newspapers are delivered, Lewis will know whether she has what it takes to compete with other fifth through eighth graders from area junior high schools.

Security beefed up in high school

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

Two security guards and eight portable radios have been acquired for the high school as a result of parents voicing their concern over the lack of security in the building.

The Romulus Board of Education members approved the measures at their Feb. 24 meeting. Physical education teachers and members of the police department are currently training people for security guard positions Superintendent of Schools William Bedell said.

They are expected to begin at the high school "within the next couple of weeks", Bedell added.

The measures were initiated to forestall problems of security in the high school.

Currently, the district employs five security guards to monitor hallways and the parking lot, Bedell said.

"The new security guards will be more physically able to halt intruders in the building," he said. "They will not be there to strictly monitor but will be more involved in security than the other guards."

Costing an estimated $40,000 per year for a 10-month period, the guards must be able to pass agility and physical endurance tests, according to guidelines set forth by the district.

Their goals, Bedell said, will be to insure the safety of students and staff during school hours.

The guards will patrol hallways, restrooms, locker rooms, entryways and parking lots.

"It's all an attempt to improve the security of the school," Bedell said.

In addition to the guards, board members approved the purchase of eight portable radios to allow security guards immediate access to each other and the office.

Cost to the district is $8,320.00.

Both the increase in guards and the purchase of radios were two items brought up by parents during a Feb. 17 school board meeting shortly after the death of senior Robert O'Day.

Injured student to enroll in adult education classes

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

The 16-year-old student who last year was injured in front of Romulus Junior High School and subsequently never returned to classes will enter the adult education program, his mother said.

Cindy Harkai, the Romulus parent who told administrators that her son, John, was attacked during a football game at the junior high and never returned to school because he was frightened of a repeat attack, said Monday that the boy would enroll this week in the Romulus Adult Education program.

Administrators said they would allow him to enroll in one adult education class so as to not overwhelm him with excessive studies.

"My husband is going to take him in to talk to officials and find out just what they will offer him as far as classes," Harkai said. "I would like him to get more than just basic academics. We have to face the fact that John cannot be a lawyer or engineer so he's going to need training in some other area."

Harkai had voiced her displeasure with school administrators for their lack of concern regarding her son's condition after the attack.

In February, she revealed that school administrators had never called to inquire why John, absent from school since the Oct. 4 incident, had not returned to classes.

Water rates drop, residents to save

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

Romulus residents will face a slightly lower water bill now that the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department has approved changes in rates charged to communities.

The new rates, confirmed by the Detroit City Council Feb. 26, include Romulus as one of 18 cities to notice a drop in consumer water rates.

Residents are currently charged $3.25 per 1,000 cubic feet of water. The new charge will be $3.08 beginning Aug. 1.

Nancy McLean, from the city finance department, said the department has not had time to analyze the savings to Romulus residents but estimated that the reduced rates reflect only "a few cents" in savings.

Romulus is one of 81 communities to face rate changes from the Detroit water department.

Sewerage rates were reduced for nearly all 81 communities within the Wayne County Middle Rouge District, which includes Romulus.

That reduction reflects a three cent savings for residents.

According to information released by Detroit, the general increase faced by other communities is due to the increase in electric power costs and to the decreased transfer of funds from operation and maintenance to capital funds.

Students at Belleville High School were having a great day because of McDonald's last week. The restaurant presented students from the school with checks as rewards in the McDonald Hamburger Enjoyment Contest last month. Belleville High students in vocational competition

Up to four students from Belleville Vocational Educational Center in Belleville will take a written test at Washtenaw Community College in Ann Arbor at 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 11 in the first phase of the annual Plymouth-AAA Shooting Contest.
Michigan students from 69 high schools will compete in the written exam, being given simultaneously at 10 sites across the state. The two highest scorers from each school will become a team, with the top 10 schools competing in a final hands-on competition May 8 at the Automotive Center at the Macomb Community College South Campus in Warren.
Instructors will submit students' names at the time of the test.
The contest is part of the world's biggest high school automotive mechanics competition and is co-sponsored by Chrysler/Plymouth and AAA Michigan for the third year. Similar contests involving more than 7,000 students are being staged in all 50 states. Prizes and scholarships totaling $500,000 will be awarded.
In the state hands-on contest, each team works against the clock to correct problems on identically "bugged" 1986 Plymouth K-cars. The top team will advance to the national championship June 23-24 in Washington, D.C.
"This contest helps to upgrade the technical capabilities of high school students who will become professionals in a specialized area," said Robert Culen, contest coordinator for AAA Michigan.

Chrysler/Plymouth Dealers Association.
The state contest committee is chaired by Mel France of the Michigan Department of Education. The event was launched in 1949 in Los Angeles by Plymouth dealers as a local contest. The Chrysler Corp. sponsored the contest nationally between 1962 and 1979.

A ‘Blue (K)night’

International club brings law enforcement convention to town

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

"I can't explain it. It's kind of a feeling of independence, kind of like you're out on your own. You don't see or feel the differences when you are riding in a car. On a bike, you can sense the differences in the land, feel the differences in the air - it's about as close as you can get to walking through nature and still get from point A to point B in a decent amount of time."

Mike Scarborough is a biker, a motorcyclist. He's a father and husband who is dedicated, energetic and an enthusiastic. Mike is also a cop, a Detroit cop. You know, the kind that everybody loves to hate but can't live without, at least in Detroit.

And it's his occupation that makes all the difference, at least since he's been a member of law enforcement motorcycle group called The Blue Knights.

The club has been what Mike might call his salvation. Even his wife, Diane, thinks so. Afterall, it wasn't until she and her husband became involved with the international organization with some 8,000 strong stretching from the United States, Canada, and Australia did she begin to grasp the reality of what her husband faced daily as a police officer.

It is more, she said, than the mere joy of the wind rushing in your face on a motorcycle. It's the camaraderie that comes with sharing that pleasure with others like themselves that gives meaning to their commitment to the club.

"We don't even fight anymore," said Diane. "We see people from all over the country now. In fact, we see these guys more than we see our own families. Blue Knights seem to want to do more for you than your own family."

Diane spoke with just a hint of bias. But so does Mike and almost any other Blue Knight member whose ties to the club remind one of some ritualistic bond broken only by death.

Renewing friendships

Perhaps that's why they are looking forward to renewing acquaintances this weekend when more than 200 club members, including those from Westland, Romulus, Royal Oak and Dearborn, meet for the Great Lakes Regional Conference, a consortium of five states, in Romulus' Holiday Inn.

The driver of the vehicle, later found to be a Pontiac police officer and former member of the Romulus force, was stopped in Van Buren Township. According to information released by the Romulus Police Department, the two pursuing officers surrounding the vehicle. there are not a lot of really visible things that we did with that money. The lack of visibility hurt us there." A 1.5 mill increase of maintenance was approved by voters in the June 1984 election, according to Business Administrator Joel Carr. That money was earmarked for the district libraries, paving of school parking lots and other improvements. Instead, Bedell said, hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent on roof repairs. The superintendent said further that voter apathy is usually the "enemy" in school elections devoid of issues. "It's true more often of school elections with no candidates up for re-election," he explained. "Part of (the low turnout) can be attributed to apathy because when things are going okay, people traditionally don't get out and vote."

The convention, no small affair by any Blue Knight standard, will rival even a presidential inaugural. Well, maybe not quite as honorable as an inaugural, but who would argue the point with 200 law enforcement officers? "It's our Big Dream Party," Mike said. "It means it ain't going to be long before we'll be on our motorcycles again." Designed to coordinate the group's activities, including the infamous motorcycle tours across the country, it will be, according to Diane, "a meeting with a purpose but with a lot of fun thrown in." And it will be a chance for men and women with a common bond to meet, talk and mingle with people like themselves - law enforcement officers.

"I've got friends in Texas, in Arizona, all over the place," said Pat Rimson, the wife of a police officer and a supporter of the Blue Knights. "I mean when you're a Blue Knight, you've got a friend, not an acquaintance but a real friend no matter where you are or what you do."

"There are all sorts of clubs out there for John Q. Citizen," explained Mike. "When people become police officers, they lose three-quarters of their friends and it's real hard to make new friends. The Knights kind of look after each other, we're all the same so it isn't so hard."

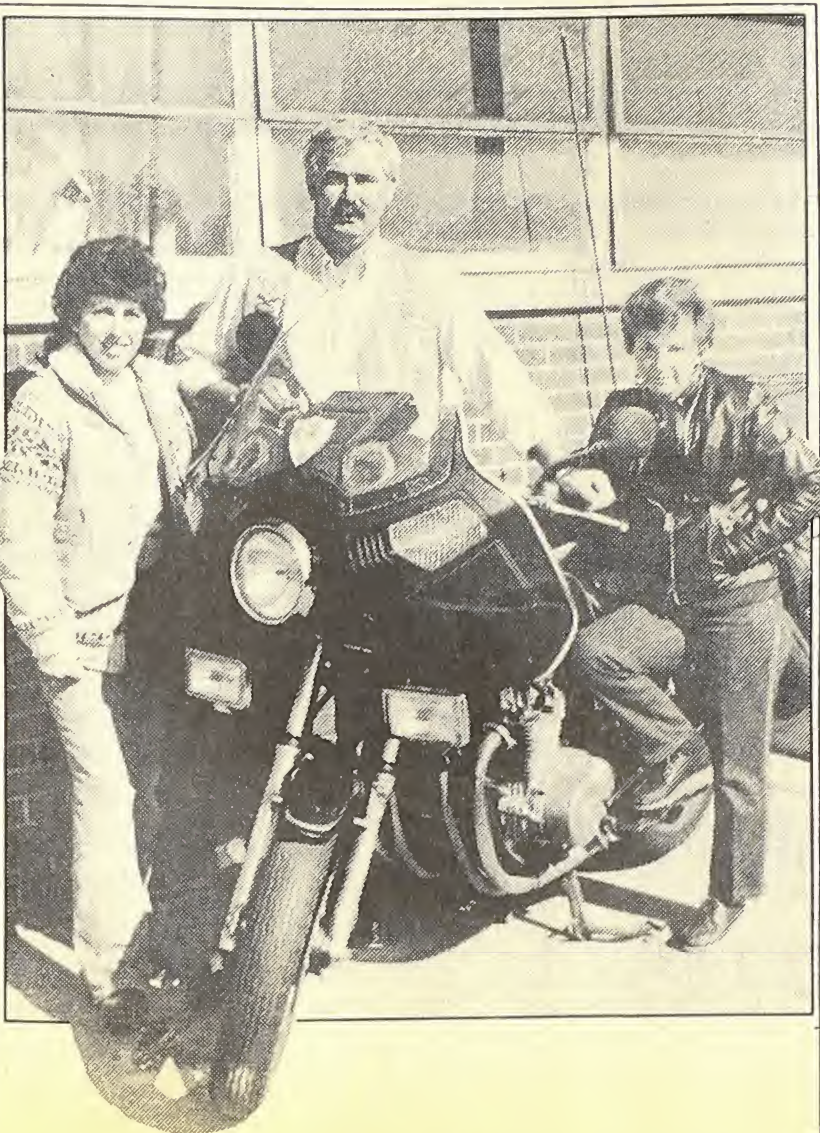

And they look after the needy and the handicapped, too.

Charity oriented

Noted for its beneficent nature, each Blue Knight chapter selects its own charity into which countless hours and money are fed. "It's a way for us to get away and relax and still help others," said Diane Siviter, public relations coordinator for the Blue Knights Chapter I and a Detroit police officer.

"Nobody gets hurt, no matter where you are or what you're doing," she said. "It's just plain, old-fashioned fun." There was the time, Mike recalled, when Ontario Chapter 4 sponsored a toy ride. Spectators witnessed a trail of 3,000 motorcycles touring through the streets of Toronto, with, imaginatively enough, a stuffed animal on every one. It took two semi-trailers to haul away the toys which went to children. Even special adaptations were made on the bikes to accommodate handicapped children's wheelchairs so each could receive a ride. "You never saw such happy kids in your life," recalled Diane Scarborough. Currently, Michigan Chapter I is working with 7-11 stores across the state to sponsor the Jerry Lewis Telethon scheduled for Labor Day weekend. Unrivalled commitment The Blue Knights, though plans are tentative, will travel from Detroit to Las Vegas with additional members stepping into place from state to state. "We're always trying to come up with some way to help," Mike said. We've committed ourselves to supplying the money for our charities." And as committed as they are to helping needy children, their commitment to fellow members remains unrivalled. As Diane Scarborough aptly stated, "If there was another organization like it, we would have joined it." The brainchild of now-retired Maine police officer Ed Gallant, the organization soon grew to include virtually every state where law enforcement officers found a need to share their time with others who knew how precious that time was in a profession that requires remaining on-call 24-hours a day. Founded in 1974 out of a desire to draw persons like himself together, with the idea of motorcycling as the main feature, Gallant today admits it's something of which he's proud. In a profession that traditionally pulls people apart, Gallant said he found something that "pulls 'em together." "They're out there everyday doing their jobs. No one else wants to do what they do. The Blue Knights just keeps them together. If they don't look out for each other, nobody else is goin' to do it."

The good guys

To dispel the image often portrayed by motorcycle gang members adorned in black jackets and chains, the Blue Knights wear blue. It's hard at times, Mike admitted, to convince people that the rip-roaring fun displayed by members is just that, fun. "We're not a gang," he insisted. "We're just cops who like to ride motorcycles. We're trying to counteract that 'bad image' routine with the kinds of activities we sponsor. We're a family-oriented club. Everything we do is for the family." In an occupation unlike any other, where the pressure, Diane Siviter said, "comes from within and without," maintaining family ties remains essential. With the Blue Knights, maintaining healthy relationships is a little easier, Diane Scarborough said. "I had three kids and I was involved with them and he had his department," she said. "We just grew further and further apart."

Tensions eased

After 12 years of marriage, Mike agreed. "I was not the easiest person to live with. Everyone is always ready to second-guess you. I'd come home, not really in the mood to do anything. Family life got a little tense. It made it hard, most policemen really don't want to drag their wives and family around other police officers. You don't want them to know how bad it really is at times, not that they don't know but you try to protect them. With the club, you are associating with friends who know... the pros and cons of your chosen profession. Besides, motorcycling was my out. A 15 mile ride on my bike and all my tensions are gone."

Motorcycling is Diane's out, too now, although she lets her husband control their 1984 Ascencade Honda equipped with AM/FM stereo, cassette player, saddle bags and trailer hitch.

"You get no financial benefits out of it," she admitted. "My garage still isn't built but I've seen a lot of the country."

Diane Siviter has been a police officer for 12 years. "I was married to a man who became a police officer. Two years later, I became one after being a teacher for the East Detroit Public School system," she said. "I realized after a while that I was safer being out in the streets with a gun than in the schools without one." Divorced, Diane joined the Blue Knights three years ago after training on department motorcycles. "Diane's probably one of the few riders, male or female, who's proved herself," Mike testified. "She's the only one I know who can ride from here to Toledo and back in 18 hours," he added, jokingly. She also participated in a 250-mile jaunt that turned into a 569-mile headache as her group searched the Michigan thumb area for towns whose names began with a letter in the club's name. The object, Mike said, was to spell Blue Knights first and verify the findings by taking a picture of the sign. The winners received a pin for their efforts.

"We passed through this one town again and again," he said. "It was named Tyre, Michigan but we couldn't find a sign showing us the name. We stopped and asked a couple people and they told us that the name of the town was posted somewhere. We went back to look for it and found the sign thrown on the ground near the railroad tracks. One guy we asked didn't even know he lived in Tyre. (The trip) was an illustrious one."

"I think three people and one dog lived there," Diane Siviter added. "But we got our pin." Membership has other benefits besides off-duty interaction.

Added rewards

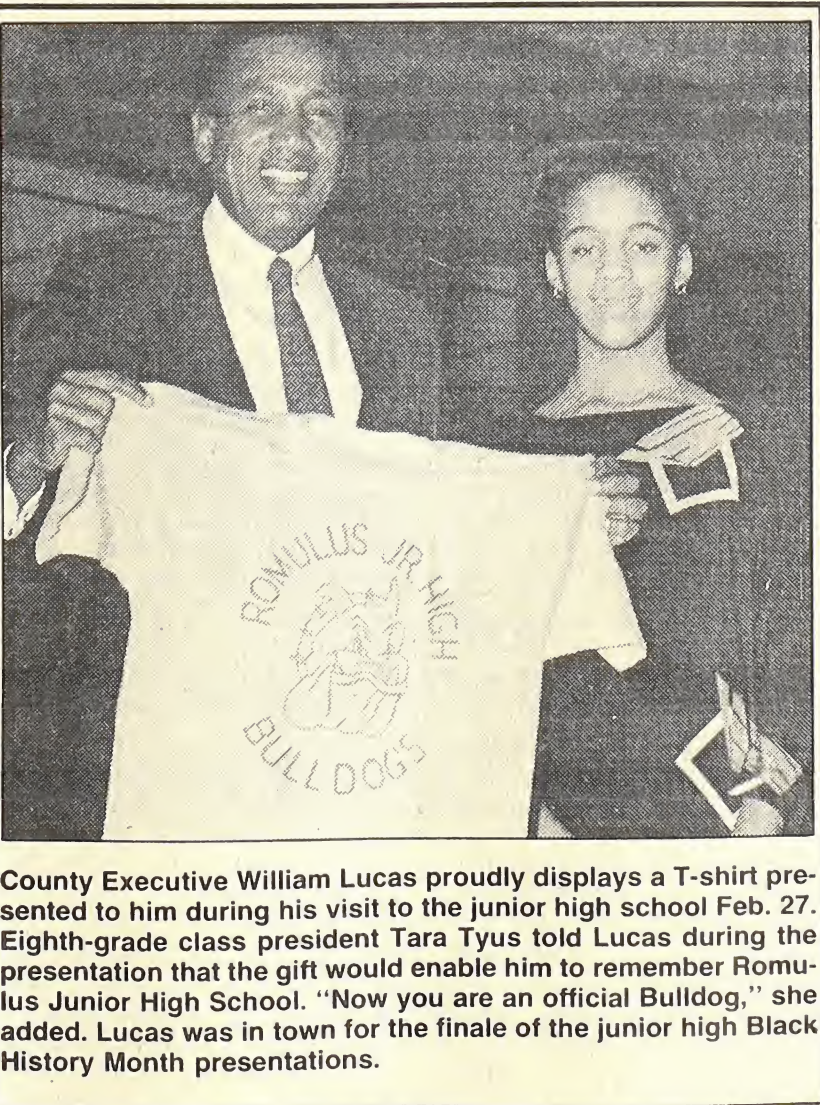

The extra bonus, Mike said, is the linking of police departments once Blue Knights are identified.

"We work together professionally as well as off-duty," he said. "It makes working relationships across city lines much easier and it takes the pressure off. Someone needs help, you say 'I'm here to help,' it's that simple. Our club is very unique, rank means nothing because everyone is equal."

One police officer's wife, having submitted an article for the Blue Knights News, wrote that the club provides "the perfect opportunity to escape our daily dilemmas. There is always a ride going on somewhere. Take one day a week just for yourselves. That's not too much to ask. It does wonders for your sanity."

"It's something you'd have to be a part of to fully understand," Mike said. "It's like family."

Law enforcement officers interested in joining the Blue Knights can contact Blue Knights Michigan 1, Attention Membership Chairperson, P.O. Box 42, Royal Oak, Mich. 48068.

Eighth-grade class president Tara Tyus told Lucas during the presentation that the gift would enable him to remember Romulus Junior High School. "Now you are an official Bulldog," she added. William Bedell said at first that he had not been aware that John was attending classes at the time of the attack. He later said that he had been misinformed. "If (Cindy Harkai) wants to bring the boy back to school we'll do everything we can for him," Bedell said. "I discussed this with her earlier and she failed to enroll him in adult ed classes." Harkai said her son, who refuses to return to regular classes, is certified learning disabled. "He won't go back to the high school," Harkai said. "It's not that he doesn't want to learn, it's just that he's frightened to death of going back there after what's happened." Harkai said statements released by the district indicating that John had been a drop-out at the time of the attack were false. "He was dropped from classes in May of 1984 for having missed 10 days of school," she said. "They told me that if he didn't drop out, they were going to have to give him incompletes." Harkai said her son returned to school in September 1985 and was still enrolled Oct. 4.

"I called Mr. Sheffield and asked him if John was in school before the attack and he told me 'yes, Cindy,'" Harkai said. "Then I asked him if John was a drop-out and he said 'no'. I said, 'thank-you, sir, that's all I wanted to know'." "The fact of the matter is that traditionally, the responsibility is placed on the parents to get their kids to school," Bedell said, in defense of administrators' failure to re-enroll John. "I don't have the facilities or the inclination to bring the school to his home but if (Cindy Harkai) wants to bring him back and re-enroll him, I have no objections." Bedell said the district would be making an exception by accepting John into the adult education program. Normally, adult education classes are reserved for persons more than 18-years-of-age who wish to complete their high school studies. "As a rule, you don't want kids just wholesale saying I want to drop out and get my diploma from adult ed," Bedell explained. "Adult education is for adults, many of whom feel funny and apprehensive about seeing 16- and 17-year-olds."

adopt a pet

He's seven weeks old, healthy, and paper trained...and workers at the Westland animal shelter are hoping to find this unnamed pup a home soon. At 12 pounds already, he will be a large dog and his ancestry may include both Labrador Retrievers and Rottweilers. He was one of an unwanted litter but is already paper trained. If you might be able to provide a home for this little guy, or for information about other animals available for adoption, phone the shelter at 721-7300.

dan's dogs

by dan a. morris

Those of you who own your own business and have a dog are doubly fortunate because you are able to take your dog to work with you. (Obviously this depends upon the type of business you are in).

We have students who own flower shops, newspaper companies, plumbing services, beauty salons. They take their dog with them daily and there is no better environment than exposure to people to make a dog calm, confident and well-mannered.

So often, when we have problems with the dog's behavior or response while being trained around people or a noisy area, we take ourselves and our dog away from that situation. Don't do it! The more noise and the more people to serve as distractions the better.

Just think, if you can get your dog to perform under that much stress you'll feel confident. He'll perform even better under less frustrating conditions.

One of the many reasons your dog should behave properly

Your dog is a reflection on his training and, like a child, on his home environment.

under stress will pay off with one visit to the veterinarian's office. Your vet has far more important things to do than to be distracted by poorly behaved animals in his outer office. Dogs become stimulated when around other animals and unfamiliar surroundings. If you have worked obedience in the crowded and noisy areas mentioned above, the time spent in the vet's waiting room will not affect him at all.

Everything your dog does and every way your dog behaves depends entirely on what you've taught him. If he is around people, strangers will not frighten him. If he is taught under noisy conditions, any commotion elsewhere will not excite him.

Your dog is a reflection on his training and, like a child, on his home environment. If you devote the time and effort to mold your dog into a proud and confident animal, you'll be proud and confident, too, to have him with you anywhere.

Business women discuss meeting

The Belleville Business and Professional Women's Organization met at the First Methodist Church in Denton on February 3. The members and guests were served an array of international foods - from Swedish meatballs to Mexican wedding cake - to celebrate BPW International month.

The highlight of the evening was guest speaker, James A. Kosteva, State Representative, 37th District. Kosteva relayed information to the group regarding the state of Michigan. He said that the state credit rating is now one of the best in the nation - a few years ago the credit rating was at the bottom of the list.

The development and job growth has increased tremendously. Another major focus is education. This is an investment in the Michigan future.

The state is currently trying to get money, which will pay off in savings in the future for early childhood and parenting education. Early childhood education is for disadvantaged children ages 3 and 4. Parenting education is to teach parents on how to be parents, how to be consumers, etc.

For more information on the group, call 697-7393.

Getting back to fiber-rich diet

Good food is a celebration of life! Eating healthy to stay healthy is now a main deciding factor when families plan their menus and dietary needs. We are constantly being bombarded with commercials on television and radio that implore us to "increase the necessary dietary fiber" in our everyday eating routine.

Now, I take these advertisements with a grain of sodium-reduced salt. Let's face it folks, nibbling trees inscribed with Euell Gibbons eulogy not only is a bit off the beaten path, but up until now, I have been relying on a daily bowl of "Fruit & Fiber" cereal to meet my requirements.

When someone mentioned the fact that I needed to increase my fiber intake, I thought they were referring to the Canadian Club that is mellowed in those big wooden vats. That piqued my interest.

I began keeping a daily log of everything I ate. Understand now that I was raised in the '60s and '70s when we were taught that white bread was about as healthy as a swim in the St. Clair River opposite Dow, Sarnia.

Fresh fruit (a great source of fiber) is a luxury in my daily repertoire. (Although I do try to munch on an apple whenever I can.) In addition, my intake of legumes was limited to an occasional bowl of four-alarm chili that surely served no benefit to my innards. Lately, however, I have been experimenting with lentils and garbanzos. Pinto beans have taken a front row seat on my shelf since I have discovered that they can be used for purposes other than refried beans.

Does this sound like the ranting and ravings of a vegetarian yuppie? Hardly, although I have significantly curbed my intake of red meat and processed foods over the last few years.

What I am trying to get across is the simple fact that so many of us are stuck on the notion of the same old foods, week in week out. Our shopping lists read like mimeographed copies of a 24-hour diner menu. If it's Sunday, this must be roast beef, eh?

Wake up! Attempt a meatless meal still rich in dietary fiber and protein. Experiment with legumes and learn that they can taste great even when they're not boiled to death in a soup with a hambone! Usually, when planning a meal that will not have something that walked as a main course, people get worried that they might not be getting the necessary protein.

Lentils, soybeans and other legumes are on the top of the list of foods most concentrated with protein, not to mention important dietary fiber. Include some eggs, milk or cheese in the recipe and the saucepot will be bursting at the seams with healthy nutritious eating.

The benefits of healthy eating could take a column in itself. The Cancer Foundation and the North American Heart Association all praise the value of high fiber, low fat diet. Usually when folks mention diet, I tend to look the other way, but I think you will find that the recipes included are both tasty and healthy.

Teen work is topic

How many hours a week can a 17-year-old work while attending school?

Are employers required to give minor employees a break?

Can minors work where alcoholic beverages are served?

These questions and many more about employing minors will be answered and discussed at a seminar on employing minors scheduled for Friday, March 7, in Wayne.

Co-sponsored by the Michigan departments of Labor and Education, the seminar will be staged at the Wayne County Intermediate School District, 33500 Van Born Road, Wayne. The session will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until noon.

The Wayne seminar is the fifth of 12 throughout the state, said Bernie Lennon, chief deputy director of the Michigan Department of Labor.

Previous seminars were conducted in Pontiac, Lansing Houghton Lake and Flint and were attended by about 250 persons representing employers and school officials.

While the seminar programs are designed to inform employers, school administrators and parents about the laws governing the employment of minors, anyone is welcome to attend.

Topics to be covered are the Youth Employment Standards Act, the Payment of Wages Act and the Minimum Wage Law.

Further information about the seminars is available by contacting Marsha Bowers, Michigan Department of Labor, Bureau of Employment Standards, 7150 Harris Dr., Box 30015, Lansing, MI 48909 (517) 322-1825.

Apathy or anomosity?

The Romulus School District had a millage vote last week. It was a simple procedure and one that was expected to bring out few voters. In fact, administrators and teachers sent out flyers and newsletters in an attempt to give parents a cursory explanation of what the district was asking for knowing full well that it would influence only a handful of conscientious voters. What followed was a prime example of voter apathy. Granted, more than 1,000 voters turned out at the polls. Six hundred approved a renewal increase of 33.5 for the next five years. Fortunately for the district, the measure won by 14 votes.

Administrators are claiming victory and legitimately so. But to suggest that the district can settle back to a healthy future may be a bit premature. In the same special election, voters turned down, by an equally slim margin, a 1.5 mill renewal for school maintenance. A mere 17 votes prevented that proposition from passing.

Money from the anticipated renewal of 1.5 maintenance mills was earmarked for school improvements. In view of the fact that voters will be faced with the same proposition during the June school board elections, administrators are not crying too loudly about having lost that round.

The question posed administrators was why did the election turned out so few voters? Why, when the fate of a district recently plagued with problems and intense media notoriety, did voters fail to respond to the plea for renewed funds?

The answer, according to the superintendent of schools is simple and two-fold.

The first explanation, Dr. William Bedell explained, is the lack of issues during this millage campaign. According to Bedell and other members of the administration, any time a millage renewal is sought without the presence of school board candidates, it's a sure bet that voter turnout will be low.

That statement might have caused some spectators to recoil in horror. Has there ever been a time when the district has received so much attention and so many negative remarks since the death of student Robert O'Day and the incidents of weapons in the school?

Has there ever been a time when so few issues have ever meant so much to parents and teachers in the district?

Perhaps not and perhaps Dr. Bedell was right in his assessment of the election. Perhaps voters didn't perceive any crucial issues in the millage and therefore stayed home.

There is Bedell's second theory: When voters who are removed from the daily interaction of the district and the schools, they tend to withdraw.

Bedell admitted that the thought of failure of both propositions was considered due to the dissatisfaction some parents were voicing about

Has there ever been a time when the district has received so much attention and so many negative remarks since the death of student Robert O'Day and the incidents of weapons in the school?

out district policy and the events of the past few months.

What he thought might happen - that they would not vote at all in an effort, however weak, to demonstrate their disapproval - did happen he said, and to the good fortune of the district.

It is then perhaps then a tainted victory that the district received the 33.5 mill renewal. By playing a low-key role in the push for the millage renewals, district coordinators took a chance on bringing out only the handful of voters who would normally turn-out for any election.

The question that should be posed is whether the millage election is a fair example of satisfaction within the district, and thereby guaranteeing passage of at least the operating mills, or whether the lack of voters was a prime example of parents' displeasure with the way the system is operating and not simply that of public apathy?

Fortunately for the school district, any number of interpretations can be wrought from this election but the bottom line is that the most important proposition passed.

Friend or foe?

Throughout our lifetimes, many of us become aware of many things that we somehow never quite manage to specifically label or name.

It's like seeing someone in your peripheral vision that seems vaguely familiar and then one day you turn, face that person and recognize. Focusing our full attention and vision on them, we are then able to identify the person and remember what they look like and could easily recognize them in the future. Human patterns, habits and characteristics are like that, at least for me.

One of the patterns that I have long since seen from the corner of my eye, but only here and now have focused on, is the friend or foe phenomenon.

In world history, we learn that friends often become enemies, and that they then, occasionally, become friends again. In modern times our changing relationships with Germany, Japan, Russia, Cuba, Iran and China are well known and established. What should not be so curious, but nonetheless is for me, are the same human patterns in our personal relationships. Those we once called "friend" for one reason or another often become estranged.

It may have been a drifting apart, it may have been something more pronounced like an incident or confrontation or a difference of opinion in an area important to both parties.

I have seen such divisions between friends literally last a lifetime. In some cases the rift lasts days, sometimes months and often, years.

What seems to be common in such matters is that someone has to act with a sense of forgiveness in order for such a deep chasm to be healed. "Time heals all wounds" according to the old saying, but that isn't always the case.

Often the matter or person which first caused the rift must no longer be present. If, for instance, two buddies are divided because they both care for the same girl in high school, their friendship can be jeopardized. But if the girl goes off with someone else, then perhaps their friendship can be repaired.

In a family where there is a "Dad always liked you best" attitude present, the death of a parent can sometimes trigger a renewed feeling of kinship. Or, if two fierce competitors both retire, they can then sit around and tell old war stories and laugh at their own adventures.

In the business world, people often develop rivalries. It is only natural to find a degree of antagonism among those competing for the customers' attention and dollars. Whether it's attorneys, doctors, banks, hardware stores or newspapers, we feel something akin to nationalism about the product we represent, or the company for which we work.

What is so interesting to me is what happens when someone changes companies. The reactions of those who make the move as well as those of the employees who stay behind are puzzling and amazing.

Some people leave and pursue a career in the same field, but not for a direct competitor. Some change fields altogether. Some go to work for themselves, directly competing with their former employers and some cross the battle line at the height of confrontation and begin to work for the opposite side.

Whether we become annoyed, angry, hostile or vindictive is largely determined by how grievous the offense is in our personal estimation. If, say during World War I, we had lost one of our best pilots who went to fly for the Germans, we would yell treason and our friend would certainly have become our foe.

If a shelf-stacker at A & P went to to work for Kroger's, co-workers would wish them well, stay in touch and perhaps continue to socialize with them.

It is sad to find that a friendship we valued, and that we believed was real, was not genuine. Our "friend" perhaps only "liked us" because we were in a position to help them achieve something they desired. Often a perceived friendship

Clerk's Job given praise

To The Editor:

I have been watching and reading the events surrounding our local clerk, Linda Churhan, I feel the woman is putting forth a sincere effort to do the job she was elected to do.

Obviously she didn't feel the former clerk was doing a good job or most likely she would not have ran.

Having met the lady, it's extremely difficult to believe she would participate in the child behavior the local press portrays.

She promised professionalism. I still feel she has provided that, possibly the supervisor is the lacking party.

Point poorly taken

To The Editor:

I can't believe what I read in last week's Wayne Eagle.

This paper has always been a booster of businesses in Wayne. You've forgotten who the villain is here.

Mulholland's was evicted, but not by Big Lot. Condoning or even suggesting picketing or boycotting of Metro Mall would only hurt the businesses that are still located there.

Complain if you will but let's put the blame where it lies. Lashing out at the innocent bystanders is wrong. Especially coming from the editor and writers of this paper.

KAY BEAN
Wayne

(Editor's Note: No writer or editor of this newspaper in any way suggested picketing or boycotting of Metro Mall. We mourn the loss of a business like Mulholland's and sympathize completely with Bill Mulholland and his family.)

Store closing causes grief

To The Editor

I am feeling a sense of great personal loss in the anticipated closing of Mulholland's Dry Goods store. In talking with friends and neighbors I find they are expressing this same feeling. We have come to depend on Mulholland's for quality merchandise at fair prices, interested, friendly and helpful salespeople to assist us, and comparative ease in parking and entering the store. Shopping there is a pleasure, and I have found it an excellent source for babies' and children's clothing.

Gradually I have come to realize Mulholland's store is unique, not only for the above reasons, but also because of the personal input of the employees, many of whom have been with the store for many years and have their own specialization. For instance, I have just recently learned that the women in the Notions Department make many of the display items such as pillows and afghans themselves. I have not found this kind of dedication in "discount stores," and in my opinion displacing Mulholland's store with a discount store will have a negative effect on shopping in Wayne.

of this decade, but one has to consider why people file suits. I speak from personal experience by saying that I have filed lawsuits to protect my family and myself from people who wanted to ride roughshod over me.

It is my understanding after calling the clerk that she is paying for her own legal fees at the present time and that she has always been willing to discuss the potential of resolving the issues. It was also told to me that she is not asking for any monetary damages.

Mr. Zazula's letter compared Ms. Chuhran's suit to that of union personnel who are not only under different sets of rules but have high-priced attorneys defending their positions.

If fail to see how a suit that someone is paying for out of their own personal income can be attributed to taxpayer dollars being spent.

My question was why would someone wish to spend their own money on a suit which has nothing to gain but relocation of work to that area of the township.

The only answer I could get was that when she took the job for the people of the township she agreed to protect all the rights of that job. In my opinion there must be a reason why the matter can not be resolved. Maybe some old skeletons are buried in places where she wants to work.

Civil rights legislation supported

To The Editor:
The Civil Rights Restoration

Act now pending in congress has one simple goal - to restore the full protection of the federal civil rights laws to older persons, the disabled, women and minorities. As we approach the second anniversary of the Supreme Court decision, Grove City College v. Bell, that severely weakened these previously very effective laws, it has become clear that if the House does not pass the restoration bill immediately, there may be no restoration bill at all.

For many years, under Republican and Democratic administrations, the civil rights laws were interpreted as congress had intended - to prohibit an entire institution receiving any federal funds from discriminating in any of its activities. The court narrowed this to prohibit discrimination only in the specific programs in which the federal monies are spent. Thus, federal law now allows a college that uses federal monies only for the purchase of gym equipment to refuse to admit women into its science classes.

Federal monies cannot subsidize institutions that discriminate. The bills pending in congress seek only to restore the original scope of the civil rights law by having them apply once again to the entire institution receiving any federal money whatsoever. This simple and popular goal (almost half the members of the House and Senate have co-sponsored the current bills) is now threatened by two controversial amendments on abortion and religious beliefs that are unrelated to the purpose of the bill and would substantively change civil rights laws. It is clear that this bill is not the proper place to address such difficult and complex issues, regardless of one's view on those matters. Nonetheless, these amendments now jeopardize the very existence of the restoration bills.

The members of congress must once again require that recipients of federal funds, in all their activities, respect the civil rights of all persons. After this month, congress will have the time or inclination to turn to any issue but the budget and campaigning in this election year. The Civil Rights Restoration Act, unencumbered by amendments that prevent its passage, must be brought to the House floor today.

Bill lowers insurates rates

The Michigan House of Representatives has approved compromise legislation that will revise the State's essential insurance act.

The end result, according to the state Insurance Bureau, will be that outstate and suburban motorists should see a relaxation of the steady increases in car insurance rates of the past several years. In fact, many auto insurance customers may actually see a reduction in their premiums.

Senate Bill 647 will limit auto insurance increases for Detroit residents to 4 percent plus inflation (based on the Detroit Consumer Price Index) for two years. After 1987, insurance companies will have the option to continue raising rates by that formula or raise them by the outstate average.

The bill also would create provisions to fight auto theft, including a requirement that no claim be paid on a suspected auto theft unless the theft is reported to the police. In addition, starting in February 1987, insurance companies would be required to give at least a 20 percent discount on the personal injury portion of insurance policies for individuals who sign statements vowing they will wear their seat belts.

I believe this is a good piece of legislation for the residents of my district and I supported it when it came up for a House vote. The primary goal of this bill is to make auto insurance rates more competitive.

One insurance official has stated that, while there may be no immediate reaction to the proposed changes, in a short time consumers will be the winner. It is expected that the majority of suburban residents will benefit from greater competition and reduced rates.

would be limited to the 4 percent plus any increases in the Detroit consumer price index provision.

This means we will probably see a lot of "bouncing rates" for a while before the market settles. Ultimately, many insurance officials predict that competition will result in falling premiums in suburban and outstate areas.

This plan detaches the suburban residents of the 37th Dis-

The measure is expected to be signed by Gov. James J. Blanchard and put into effect immediately.

Naturally, under this new plan, it will be wise for all policy-holders to shop around for the best coverage and rates. Under the bill, insurance companies that do not sell auto coverage in Detroit now would have until April 1 to raise their rates to a level comparable to those charged by such insurers as AAA, Allstate and other Detroit insurers. After April 1, annual rate increases in Detroit trict from Detroit. Rather than paying the rates charged within the city of Detroit, the policy-holders in our area should be charged rates that are more reflective of this area and representative of the number of claims filed in our area.

The measure is expected to be signed by Gov. James J. Blanchard and put into effect immediately.

wall street the week ahead

DEAR INVESTOR, There did not appear any immediate reason for the Federal Reserve Board to lower the discount rate to 7 percent from 7½. It would appear that recent political appointees have an edge in voting strength; but may lack economic experience. The recent vote indicates their concern is "short-term political."

To ensure a good economic climate, for the fall elections, it was considered prudent to re-inflate the economy. This recent action will raise speculation on future economic policy and Paul Volckers commitment to control inflation.

Now that the anticipated discount rate has occurred, the market is reacting as though it is a non-event. Realization that this could set off an inflationary spiral will cause rates to firm and move higher. If, and only if, economic growth accelerates beyond 5 percent, and unemployment decreases to below 7 percent, it could force the Fed to raise the discount rate. This is the action Paul Volcker was trying to prevent. The prospect of inflation will add strength to gold and silver prices.

For this week, I see the market opening mixed to down, as big blocks are offered on the sell side and specialists accumulate small buyers. Small buyers are eager to take long positions, but it is difficult to distribute large blocks. The time delay in accumulating buy orders will cause large swings in prices. However, by the end of the session, enough small buyers will be present to add strength to the market. This is a time of great caution, as large blocks of stock are distributed.

For this week, short-term traders will use market strength to close out positions and move to the sidelines. Intermediate and long-term traders will hold their present positions, but will not be willing to accumulate additional holdings.

NOTE: The merchandise trade deficit swelled to a record $16.46 billion in January; Construction spending rose .9 percent in January but nonresidential construction contracts plunged 14 percent; Leading indicators fell .6 percent in January and new-home sales climbed 4.4 percent to their highest level in two years; Auto sales plunged 25.6 percent late last month; Oil output expected to fall; Retailers report sluggish February sales as high consumer debt and bad weather discouraged shoppers.

is revealed to be false when the true object of affection is removed.

Baby Doc Duvalier, Denny McLain, Richard Nixon, Bill Milliken, Al Kaline and Mark Fydrich are not apt to have as many "friends" as they once thought they had. All this, I guess, is to say that we should all have a sense of reality about this elusive thing we call friendship.

It is, after all, in its truest form a rare commodity. If we are lucky enough to find it, we should hold it in high regard and treasure it, for it is difficult at best to replace.

Most people could count on the fingers of one hand those who value our friendship and who would stick with us through thick and thin. Choose your friends wisely, gentle reader, and value the sense of comradeship, fellowship and solace they offer. And above all else we should remember that to have a friend we must be a friend.

See you next week.

Destiny of garbage is little-known fact

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

When "Dear Old Dad" performs the least favorite chore in every household by taking out the garbage he probably never thinks twice about what happens to the five or six plastic-wrapped bags that are placed on the curb.

When Junior stands in awe watching the garbage men (or sanitation engineers as they are called today) heave those same bags into the foul-smelling garbage truck, he most likely never loses a wink of sleep worrying where the family garbage is headed from there.

And when high-class executives sit around the 25-foot conference table making jokes about what it must like to work in the sanitation business, it probably never is imagined what the city would be like without this service.

But employees at the Waste Management garbage disposal facilities in Canton Township think about these things every day and understandably so with more than 200 loads of residential and industrial trash being deposited on their working grounds every 24 hours.

Jim King, general manager of the Woodland Meadows Landfill, a subsidiary of the Waste Management Corp., reported that very few consumers think seriously about garbage and the need to dispose of it. Instead, King said, people cast a negative shadow on the subject and only concern themselves with this inevitable fact of life when a garbage-landfill site is being proposed 300 feet from their houses.

The average piece of garbage has an interesting destiny and travels enough miles before it becomes history to earn frequent-flyer bonus points on most airlines.

To understand the path of a

piece of this unspoken aspect of human life, one might actually follow a single piece of garbage — let's say a banana peel — through each of the various stages to the great garbage heaven in the sky.

First, and probably the most obvious step, the banana peel will join the empty milk cartons, coffee grounds, broken baby food jars and old tennis shoes in the kitchen garbage can. In this stage, the banana peel already begins to decay, although only slightly, and break down into its organic chemical components.

For the next step, "Dear Old Dad" must come into the picture. Compaction is a key factor in waste removal and it begins right in the household. Instead of the huge metal plates and machines that compact trash industrially, the average consumer must opt for a more simple alternative — the foot. As Dad packs the garbage with his foot with an occasional jump up and down and a quick glance to make sure no one is seeing him performing such an "unsophisticated" chore, he begins to crush the garbage further breaking it down into its natural chemical components.

The long haul of the trash bag to the curb isn't really a major factor in the decomposition of our banana peel here but it may be worth noting since garbage men seldom provide door service.

With a burly heave and a "ho", the trash bag is thrown some 10 feet into a brown, dull, greasy, foul-smelling truck where it becomes mingled with its neighboring trash bags. Next, the metal compressor of the truck swings down ripping the bags to shreds and further compacting the garbage and breaking it down into its simple chemical components.

From there the banana peel travels to the Central Wayne County Sanitation Authority where it is further compressed and placed in a double-axle semi-truck. Next, it's off to Canton Township to the Woodland Meadows Landfill where the banana peel will finally meet Mother Nature.

Garbage

Having been compacted by human and mechanical forces again and again, the typical piece of garbage now is only 1.9 percent of the original size. But compaction has not ended.

At the landfill, the load of garbage is dumped from the semi into one of several "cells" of land. The cell is a marked-off location in the landfill where earth has been moved and dug up so that garbage can be buried.

A multi-ton bulldozer rolls over the bags several times and mashes them with a sharp blade to further compact and break down the trash. After several loads have been dumped and several bulldozers have disintegrated the materials into just fractions of the original garbage size, dirt and clay are dumped over the trash so Mother Nature can perform her own breaking down procedures.

Underneath this cell are water pipes. As rain hits the earth covering the garbage it soaks into the trash and continues downward. The water becomes polluted and sometimes contaminated.

The pipes collect the water through small holes in the top of each pipe and carry the unclean water to a central point. After it is checked by a computer to be sure no water is toxic, the water is piped into the city sewer system where it eventually flows into the Detroit treatment plant.

Although only one landfill site is currently licensed to accept hazardous/toxic wastes, King reports that consumers everyday produce a considerable amount of hazardous waste. By definition, hazardous wastes are toxic (poisonous, causing harm to humans), corrosive (eats away at storage containers), reactive (chemically unstable) or ignitable (could explode or catch on fire).

Residential hazardous wastes include oil, bleach, bug spray and paint, to name just a few. If these material were disposed of by industry, a toxic waste permit would need to be secured. However, state law maintains that anything a resident disposes of is not legally hazardous, although by environmental standards they are.

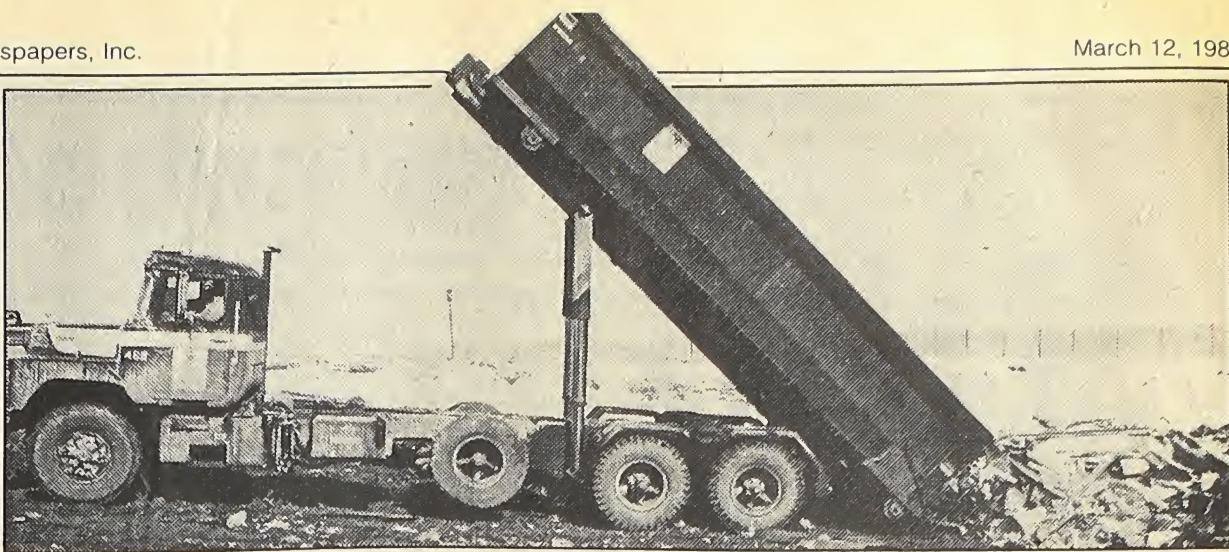

Nevertheless, King explained that the American fear of landfills is evidence of the misunderstanding and lack of education about landfills, their purpose and necessity. Although sometimes unsightly and odoriferous, King said their existence is needed to maintain modern civilization.

Getting back to the banana peel which has now become embedded into the ground and is covered with hundreds of feet of earth, what's next?

Well, according to King, Mother Nature has to take her course in breaking the garbage down further and further until it becomes dirt again. How long does this take?

"It takes hundreds of years," said King. "In our lifetime and probably our children's lifetime, (the garbage in the landfill) will probably be just a hill."

Therefore, this saga of our now infamous banana peel must pause for just a short commercial break. More details in another hundred years or so.

ANP photos by Chief Photographer Lothar E. Konietzko

After garbage is picked up from curbsides, it is sent to the central dumping point in Dearborn Heights. From there, it is loaded in semi-trailers and hauled to a landfill site in Canton Township. The garbage is dumped into one of many "cells" at the landfill and is then covered with dirt where it will stay for hundreds of years. The litterbug on the street, however, throws our simple garbage cycle out of tune as this street garbage may end up in one of many places.

Rosemary Near: Radio hostess

Into the future
Local radio host predicts the unknown

By JOAN MARY DYER
ANP Staff Writer

For the past three years, a call to W-CAR between 10 and 11 a.m. has provided callers with insights into their romantic, financial and health concerns. Rosemary Near and Linda Newman have shared the duties of hostesses for the popular weekday radio program, usually alternating the hostess chores weekly.

According to Near, most people request a general astrological reading but many have specific areas of concern. As an example, one woman called to ask for advice on ending her 52-year marriage. Near advised her to "hang on for another 50 years, and if it doesn't work, divorce him."

Health is another major issue of concern for the callers, Near said. Because the person is concerned with health, there probably is some reason for the individual to want information about his well being, she said.

"I always start with a disclaimer and tell the person that I am not a doctor and then advise the person to seek medical help. Sometimes, I can pick up on some stress that the person is experiencing and I make the individual aware that the stress may be contributing to the health problem," Near said.

Most of the calls are on a lighter note, she said. For example, a regular caller telephoned to ask Near if she could help her to find her mother's dentures. It seems the elderly woman did not like to wear her dentures and would hide them rather than wear them. Fortunately, Near was able to provide the clue that located the missing plate.

Another caller was very upset because her hamster was lost. Near used her psychic abilities to determine that the pet was hiding in the toe of one of the owner's shoes in a closet. Sure enough, Near said, the woman called back to confirm that she had found the pet just as Rosemary Near had predicted.

Because callers often are kept waiting as long as 10 minutes on a busy day while other persons are on the line with Near, some amusing incidents often occur when the calling party is finally put through. After the long wait, Rosemary Near and all of the radio listeners have heard the familiar sound of water flushing in the background on several occasions.

Near also reports that there are some sad and serious moments on the program. Recently widowed women have called to express their grief and hopelessness and Near has exceeded her two-minute deadline and given them some extra attention. Near also keeps a social service directory handy and makes referrals when she finds that an individual is in need of professional help.

"A man called in to ask about his wife's reluctance to allow him to take his step-daughter on a trip," Near said. "As we talked, I picked up that there could be some abuse involved with the young girl. Obviously, I couldn't say that on the radio, but I did advise him to seek family counseling and told him that if he chose not to see a counselor, I would wonder why he would not. Then I asked him if he understood what I meant and, after a long pause, he said 'I do.'"

Rosemary Near has a unique way of viewing her psychic abilities. Rather than seeing herself as fortune teller or predictor of events, she sees her ability as providing a road map for those who seek her aid. She emphasizes the ability of the individual to make his or her own choices and to take responsibility for behaviors.

"I also hear from a lot of lonely people and I try to direct them to some group or organization where they will find persons with similar interests," she said. "We have an interesting dichotomy in our society. On one hand, we encourage people to be strong and responsible and to take care of themselves. Then we wonder why people are afraid to reach out to others or why they feel a loss of self-respect when they do."

The weekday radio sessions are strictly for call-ins, and on Thursdays between noon and 1 p.m., there is time for some in-depth discussions on dreams, special guests and different topics. She has co-hosted the program with Russ Mumaw and presented motivational talks on the Thursday show.

Rosemary Near also attempts to take the myths and mysticism out of her astrological knowledge and psychic abilities.

"A hundred years ago or so, the prediction of the weather was thought to be supernatural," Near said. "Now we see it as a science."

LATE NIGHT WITH DAVID LETTERMAN: THE BOOK
Edited by Merrill Markoe
Villard Books
207 pps. $8.95

This book will undoubtedly be a sheer joy to anyone that enjoys the warped, semi-depraved humor that the David Letterman Show.

Unlike mainstay Johnny Carson, Letterman is much more offbeat. While Carson is likely to ask a guest about their upcoming television show or movie, Letterman tries to get Terri Garr to take a shower on camera and is wont to ask the unexpected question. For example, when my personal fave Nastassia Kinski appeared on the show with her hair standing about two-feet high (plus, she was acting like a real dip), Letterman interrupted her to inquire "now, just what is the deal with your hair?"

Anyway, this book (and a good bargain at that) is chocked full of the best of viewer mail, subway etiquette (examples: never ask a person if they're a drug dealer; collect human hair, saliva, chewing gum, pickle relish and whatever else may be sticking to the seat in front of you, because it will help pass the time better and of course, always freshen up a sleeping bum).

Typical show segments (well, as typical as they get on Late Night) are represented in chapters titled "The Museum Of The Hard to Believe," "Dave's Toy Shop" and "The World Of The Future." Also, don't pass up the "Camping with Barry White" section, (don't get caught camping without your lounging pajamas, or tent mirrored roof attachment).

If this book were a movie, it would be rated PG. If it were a videotape, I'd buy it. If it were a play, I'd go see it. If it were a book, I'd buy it. Which I did. And so should you.

And remember this bit of etiquette: never blow your nose into your right hand.

Regional pairings pit Romulus and Salem Belleville clashes with Trenton tonight at EMU

Four area high school basketball teams survived their first major "March Madness" test. They have won district basketball championships and qualified for this week's regional competition.

And three of the local teams — Romulus, Belleville and Plymouth Salem find themselves at one regional, Eastern Michigan University, where they will be joined by Trenton.

In the meantime, Inkster, has a tough assignment in its first round Class B regional exam tonight at River Rouge. Coach George Thompson's Vikings will face Detroit Northern at 7 p.m. Northern, ranked number 1 in the state Class B polls, has to its long list of accomplishments this season the distinction of knocking off Detroit Southwestern, a perennial Class A state-title contender.

Melvindale and Monroe

Catholic Central played last night and the winner will take on the Inkster-Northern survivor for the championship scheduled for 7 p.m. Friday at Rouge. The regional winner will advance to the state quarter-finals.

"Those who have been following high school basketball this season need no introduction to Northern," said Thompson. "They have an exceptional team and exceptional talent, and we're going to have our hands full."

At EMU where Belleville and Trenton will kick off the tournament at 6:30 p.m., Belleville Coach Leon Birdyshaw also doesn't need a program to recognize the Trojan players.

"We split with them (Trenton) this year in the league," said Birdyshaw. "We beat them 70-69 in what I considered our worst game the first time around, but they had a couple of kids who were sick. The second time we lost 88-81 in a double overtime and those two kids who were ill came back and scored 51 points between them."

"This rematch should tell us a lot," he added.

Romulus, with 6-9 Terry Mills, and guard Stevie Glenn, will have to contend with a never-say-die Salem team at 8:30 p.m. Salem came back and avenged losses to Westland John Glenn and Northville to capture the district title at Plymouth Salem.

"When it comes to playoffs and the game at Wayne is indicative of what can happen, anything can happen," noted Romulus coach Al Wilkerson.

Romulus was forced into two overtimes before it managed to pull out a 93-92 victory in the semi-final round. Romulus went on to trounce Taylor Truman to capture the district title.

After waging a battle to the finish before a capacity crowd Thursday night against Wayne Memorial and surviving 93-92 in a double overtime, Romulus returned to Wayne's Alumni Gym Saturday and encountered little resistance from Taylor Truman in its bid for a Class A district basketball championship.

Coach Al Wilkerson and his Eagles trounced Truman 89-58 to capture their second district championship in three years. They will resume play tonight at 8:30 at Eastern Michigan University where they will take on the winner of the Plymouth-Canton district, Plymouth Salem.

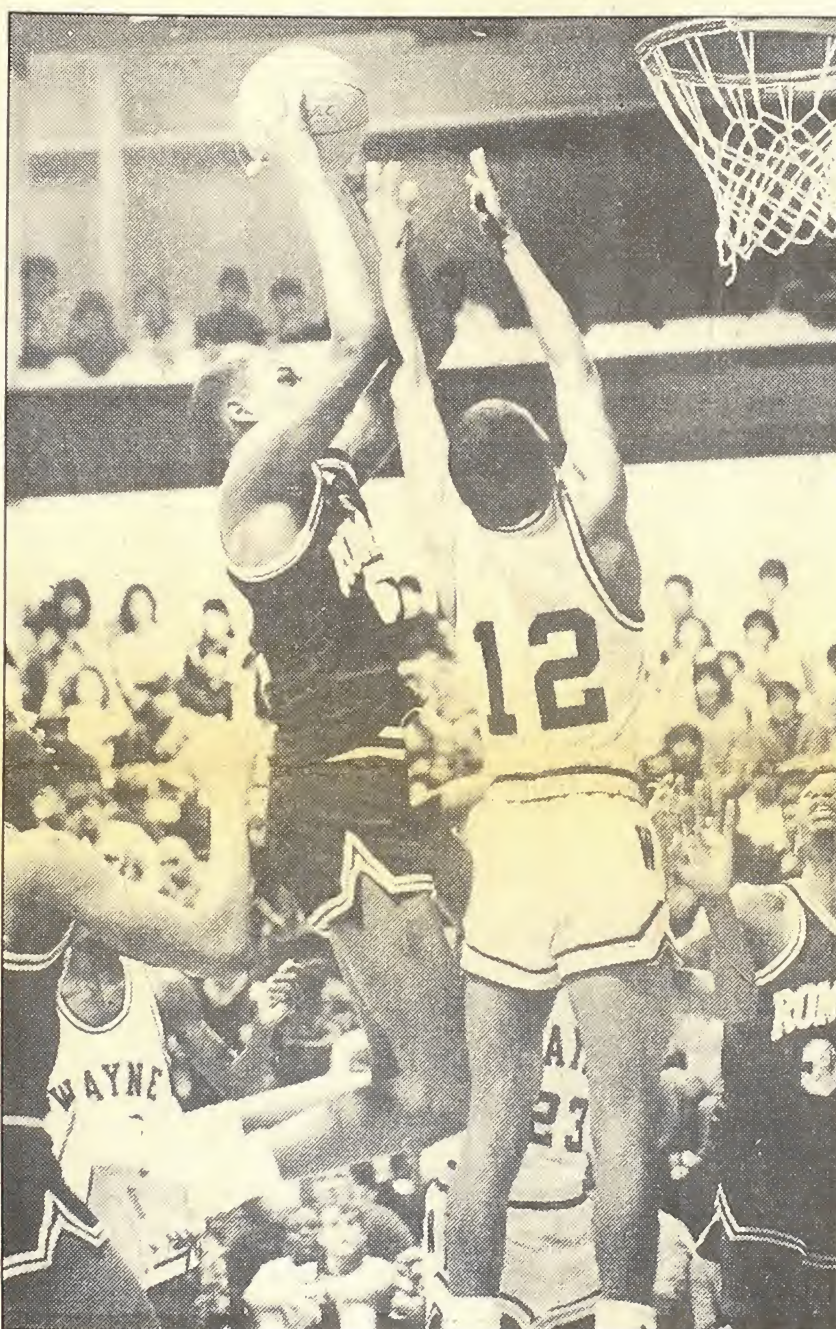

Romulus carries a 19-2 overall record into tonight's game. The winner will meet the survivor of the Belleville-Trenton contest (also scheduled for tonight at 6:30). The championship will be decided 8:30 p.m. on Friday at EMU.

With prep All-American Terry Mills scoring 23 points and senior guard Stevie Glenn connecting for a game-high 27, Romulus outmanned Truman in every phase of the game.

Ahead 20-11 at the end of the first period, the Eagles increased their advantage to 41-29 at the halftime mark before outscoring their rivals 16-11 and 32-20 in the final two periods.

"It was nice to win the district," Wilkerson said. "And we had an opportunity to play all of our kids."

Mills on rampage

Scoring four consecutive baskets in the second overtime, which received immediate response from Wayne, 6-9 Terry Mills (52) soars toward the basket over objections from Rod Sommers (15). Mills' free throw eventually decided the emotional duel, 93-92, which enabled Romulus to get past the host last Thursday. Romulus went on to defeat Taylor Truman Saturday night, 89-58, for the Class A district title.

Taking a decade of basketball frustrations out on one of its arch rivals and beating tournament favorite with "a lot of patience and emotion," Belleville High captured its first Class A district championship in over a decade at Bedford over the weekend.

To earn their first district title since 1975, Coach Leon Birdyshaw and the Tigers managed the coup with a victory over Ypsilanti in the semi-finals, 84-71, then jolting Adrian in the finals 60-58.

Salem rips Northville, 75-57

By Keith A. DeMolay
ANP Special Writer

There is an old basketball maxim that says watch out when you have to play a team three times in one season. They're bound to get you in the last one, if you happen to win the first two.

Northville High's Mustangs certainly discovered that out Friday night as Plymouth Salem, a team they saw twice in the league, came back to haunt them in the Class A district championship game at Canton High.

Salem destroyed Northville, 75-57, to win the title and advance to the Class A regional tournament to be staged tonight at Eastern Michigan University.

The Mustangs had beaten Salem twice during the Western Lakes Activities Association season en route to a 15-5 record and a second place finish in the Western Division. Northville continued to flex its muscles in the playoffs as the Mustangs trampled Canton and ousted Novi in the semi-final round.

But somebody forgot to inform Salem, the owner of a 9-10 won-lost record, that Northville coveted the title. Salem got to the finals the hard way, beating conference champ, John Glenn, 60-57.

And the Salem-Northville rematch for the championship started off with the Mustangs dominating their rivals. Don Norton, a 6-2 senior forward who impressed many on Wednesday night with 30 points against Novi, picked up where he left off with seven points, including six free throws. Northville took a narrow 11-10 lead.

But Salem would not quit. In fact, they got balanced scoring from their line-up as they came to within two, 28-26, at the half. Bryan Kearis, a 5-11 junior guard, began hitting the mark with six points, and backcourt mate Tony Moore had four.

Northville kept the lead, thanks to the continued hot hand of Norton, who accounted for 11 of his team's 17 points, in the quarter.

But another old basketball maxim says that a one-man shooting exhibition doesn't necessarily win ballgames. At halftime, Norton had scored 18 of the Mustangs' 27 points.

jumped on them, 23-11, in the first period thanks to Wes Currie who collected seven points and Chris Grantham who had six of his 13 points in the first eight minutes. Ypsi had the lead, 6-2, when the Tigers tore off 16 unanswered points.

Belleville managed to protect their shaky advantage the rest of the night, but not before the Braves rallied to a 20-17 lead in the second period and cut into the Tiger margin, 40-31, at halftime. Both teams exchanged baskets and points evenly after the half, putting 17 on the board. However, the Ti-

And Salem proved it true as the Rocks got scoring from everyone who played the period, including Kearis's six points. Moore's basket at the 6:20 mark gave them a 33-28 lead and Kearis hit a bucket at the 3:43 mark for a 41-32 lead. Tom D'Angelo, a 6-6 center, pumped one in at the 1:49 mark to give Salem a 46-36 advantage.

Northville trailed, 47-38, after three quarters, as Norton was the only Mustang to score. His 10 points raised his game-high total to 28. He scored 32 for the evening.

It was more of the same in the fourth quarter as nine of the 13 Salem players found their way into the scoring column.

Kearis hit six free throws to finish the night with 22 and certainly has to have Coach Bob Brodie smiling for next year.

Salem pulled away by as many as 18, 68-48, at the 3:00 mark on a basket by Paul Makara. Dave Collins' bucket with 1:20 made it a lopsided 73-54 and sealed Northville's doom.

Norton hit on four free throws in the final period to finish with a game-high 32 points.

Inkster destroys Dearborn

Vikings take on Detroit Northern in Rouge regional Burying host Dearborn 22-6 in the first period, Inkster raced to a 69-46 victory over the Pioneers Saturday night to capture the Class B district basketball championships and qualify for the regionals.

Coach George Thompson and the Vikings will travel to River Rouge tonight to take on state-ranked Detroit Northern in the first round of the playoffs.

At Dearborn, the Vikings left little doubt which team was best. They knocked off Cherry Hill in the first round, then erased Dearborn Divine Child from their paths, 78-58, before eliminating Dearborn in the finals, 69-46.

"I am extremely proud of this team," Thompson said. "They gave 150 percent and the results show it. When we lost three of our players because of academic ineligibility, there was a cloud on our future. These kids proved to everyone that hard work pays off. They not only won their league title, but now have also captured a district championship."

With Andre Davis tossing in eight points and the two Hardy brothers — Barry and Jesse — contributing six and four points, respectively, and Darryl Green adding four, Inkster jumped out in front by 16 points after the first eight minutes and never looked back.

Dearborn never got closer than 10 the rest of the way as Thompson freely used his bench.

Both teams put 15 points on the scoreboard in the second period, and the Pioneers managed to cut into Inkster's 16-point edge in the third period by outscoring their visitors, 15-12, in the third period, but the Vikings soared back and buried their foes 20-10 in the finale.

Davis finished the evening with a game-high 19 points, one more than Jesse Hardy while Barry Hardy finished with 14. Davis also accounted for 12 rebounds and Barry counted 10.

Dearborn got 14 points from Steve Moore and 12 from Matt MacIntosh.

A physical-and-upset-minded Divine Child kept pace with Inkster for eight minutes, trailing by one, 14-13, after the first period, then the Vikings rolled to a 19-8 second period to take a 33-21 lead into the locker room. The Vikings, turnover-prone, cashed in on numerous Pioneer mistakes to keep their distance. However, the Vikings could have put the Falcons away earlier had they not committed 21 miscues.

Barry Hardy led the winners with 21 points, while his brother, Jesse, sank 16, and Davis finished the evening with 21.

John Filiatrant led D.C. with 17 and two others — Tom Doring and John Young — wound up with 16 and 10 points, respectively.

Both teams were busy at the foul line where the Vikings canned 24 of 34 chances as compared to the Falcons' seven of 14.

Thompson commended the efforts of two relatively newcomers to the starting line-up. He pointed out that Green, a junior, piled up 38 assists in three games "and has been the difference in these playoffs." Andre Hardy also earned praise from the Viking coach. The sophomore has moved into the line-up and has used his 6-2 frame to muscle an average of nine rebounds per game.

"I can't say enough about these kids. They have made tremendous contributions to our success," Thompson said.

A sure thing

With Dearborn defenders left in his wake, Inkster's Andre Hardy "dunks one" en route to a victory over the Pioneers. The victory was the Vikings' ticket to the Class B regional playoffs at River Rouge where Detroit Northern is waiting.

Congratulations to district basketball champs: Romulus Belleville Salem and Inkster

At the controls

Romulus's senior guard Stevie Glenn finds a stop sign in the form of a Wayne defender in front of him during the semi-final classic last Thursday. A crowd that was estimated at approximately 3,600 showed up to witness the game that needed two overtimes to decide.

last 25 years." Wayne forced their visitors into two overtimes before a Mills's free throw broke a 92-all tie and settled the issue. Until then, it was anyone's guess which team would walk off as the winner.

It was Mills who took command in that second overtime that finally made the difference. With the score at 82-all as the second extra period began, he scored the first of four consecutive shots, but each drew direct response from Wayne — as Fred Horne, Alvin Allen, Spencer Williams and Steve Allen each came through with rapid baskets.

With the score tied at 90-all, Mills was awarded a one-and-one and made the tailend of the charity. A crucial turnover provided the ball back to the Eagles and with 11 seconds left in the overtime, Mills again was fouled and he didn't miss the opportunity to seal this big victory.

With the 3,600 fans on their toes, Mills found the mark and sank two free throws, putting the game out of reach. Wayne got the ball back and came back and scored an uncontested shot, leaving the Zebras, one shy.

"It was one heck of a game," said Wilkerson. "What can you say. It was the best played

Salem is Glenn's nemesis at district cage playoffs

By KEITH DeMOLAY
ANP Special Writer

Now there are three... Add the name of Plymouth Salem on the list of Westland John Glenn "nemesis". Like North Farmington and Livonia Franklin before them, Salem put a wrinkle into the post-season plans of the Rockets and Coach Gordie Davis by inflicting a season-ending, tournament-eliminating 60-57 loss in the semi-final round of the Class A district basketball playoffs staged at Plymouth Canton. Salem went on to capture the district championship

It was Salem that two weeks before snapped Glenn's 12-game winning streak and now had brought the curtains down on Glenn's 15-6 season.

"It's always disappointing when you lose, and especially in a playoff situation," said Davis. "I wish Salem continued success in the playoffs."

all-conference team, was the Rocket triggerman who sparked a 13-2 rally with a 3-point play at the 4:41 mark. Then Glenn began to pull

'It's always disappointing when you lose and, especially when that loss comes in a playoff situation.'
— John Glenn Coach Gordie Davis

And it looked like Salem would have everything its way when they rushed to a 6-2 lead last Wednesday by the 5:35 mark on a basket by Paul Makara.

But the Rockets hadn't come this far to surrender that easily. Steve Hawley, named to the away as Hawley added six more points, Boles picked up two and Dan Liedel completed the spurt with a bucket with 40 seconds remaining that made it 15-8 in favor of the Westlanders.

The Rockets expanded that lead to as many as nine early in (See GLENN, Page 3-C) game on both sides of the court that I have seen in a long, long time."

Wayne coach Chuck Henry agreed. "I'm speechless. It's too bad a team has to lose this kind of game. Both teams and players must be commended. We lost. Yes, we're disappointed. But anyone who saw that game will agree, it was the kind of game we can all be proud of."

Romulus started off with a 19-11 first period lead, but Wayne came back thanks to a balanced scoring attack provided by Mark Robinson and Allen, to cut the lead to 33-31 at the halftime mark. Both teams playing relentlessly on defense kept the game contested the rest of the night. Romulus outscored their hosts 22-20 in the third period, but Wayne made up the difference in the fourth, 21-17, tying the game at 72-all at the end of regulation play. It was Stevie Glenn who kept the Eagles in the game in the stretch scoring two key buckets in the overtime that gave the visitors an 80-76 lead. It was short-lived as Allen countered with a basket and the two teams had to settle for an 82-all score after the first overtime.

Mills was incredible in the second extra period as no one apparently could stop him. He played the boards to perfection — and was unstoppable.

Wayne got a superb performance from Mark Robinson who made eight of his shots from the field and canned 11 of 13 free throws for a team high 27 points. He fouled out and wasn't available for the overtime action. Teammate Spencer Williams accounted for 19 points and Rodney Sommons added 14 before leaving the duel due to personal fouls.

On the other side of the ledger, Mills's 37 points were the evening's high. Glenn came up with 19 — but four of those points proved crucial. They returned the leash to the Eagles. Johnson finished with 13.

Let's go, Glenn

Romulus Coach Al Wilkerson informs his star point guard, Steve Glenn, that things have to change out there. And Glenn and the Eagles failed to get their message across to a very stubborn Wayne Memorial until a second overtime...and then just barely, 93-92. Romulus is back in action tonight at Eastern Michigan.

Today Dearborn, tomorrow Northern

There was time to celebrate over the weekend for Inkster High's basketball team which emerged with three consecutive victories at Dearborn to capture the Class B district title. Coach George Thompson and his Vikings head for River Rouge tonight where they will take on Detroit Northern, a team some believe is the finest high school team in the state this year. Inkster wrapped up the regular season by winning its second straight Suburban Athletic Conference championship using players to fill in for three key cagers who were ruled ineligible due to academics. "I am proud of this team because they showed that they can play as a team," Thompson said as he prepared to face Northern. A victory over Northern? The Vikings believe in miracles and anything can happen.

Belleville wins crown

gers again mustered enough scoring power to destroy Ypsi's grip with a 27-23 edge in the final quarter.

Grantham, ailing with the flu last week, appeared fully recovered as he scored 13. But the team's high scorer was Mike Hardy who pumped in 16 and contributed 11 rebounds. Also in two figures were Maurice Brantley and Currie, each with 14. Tait's contribution to the victory was 16 rebounds, while Clark stood out on defense.

Ypsi kept in the game thanks to Jim Douglas's heroics. He scored 15. Tubbs and Dave Williams also were in double figures with 19 and 14 points, respectively.

The last time a Belleville team defeated Ypsilanti was in 1976.

Birdyshaw changed his strategy for the Adrian game. "We slowed it down in the first period," he explained. "After the emotional impact of the Ypsi game, I felt that we would have difficulty playing four periods, so I decided to have the game decided in two or three."

The strategy apparently paid off. Although Adrian grabbed a 9-4 first period lead, Belleville came back with 19 points in the next period with Grantham and Brantley each scoring six, to grab a slim 23-21 margin at halftime. It was also "nip-and-tuck" the rest of the way.

Belleville held the edge 16-15 in the third period, but Adrian came back with a 22-21 advantage in the final quarter.

Belleville also used a technical foul against its coach to its advantage.

Up by three, 39-36, as the third period began, Adrian managed to can two free throws after a controversial foul that led to a 2-foul technical against the Tiger coach. Adrian capitalized on the outburst and went up 40-39.

"I called a 'time-out,'" said Birdyshaw, "and talked it over with the kids. When we came back, these kids were all fired up, and Brantley gave us a three-point play that put us up again, and we never relinquished the lead after that." Grantham was superb as he controlled the tempo of the game and made 23 points en route to 12 assists. Currie, the mainstay of the Tiger defense, continued his role as team leader despite failing to break into the scoring column

Wayne's cage heroes

After stashing away their second consecutive Wolverine 'A' Conference basketball championship, Wayne Memorial forced highly-touted Romulus into a double overtime Thursday night before losing the Class A district playoff heartbreaker, 93-92. Wayne finished the 1985-86 campaign with an enviable 18-3 won-lost record, winning a record 16 consecutive games before losing. Members of the record-setting Wayne club include Fred Horne (front row, from left), Rod Sommons, Alvin Allen, Spencer Williams and Dean Jackson; the second row line-up includes Garry Hankerson, Derick Rucker, Mark Robinson, Dave Sentowski, Corey Hines, Mark Claiborne and Coach Chuck Henry.

Wayne Memorial gymnasts have something to cheer and smile about after capping a successful season by winning their conference championship and finishing among the top 10 teams at the Class A regional. Canton is ousted by Northville in first round of playoffs

It was a "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" sort of game. And the victim of the quick and sporadic exchange of play was Plymouth-Canton which was dealt a season-ending, 53-49, defeat at the hands of Northville in the first round of the Class A District Basketball Playoffs last Monday.

Although Northville prevailed, Canton made the district finalist sweat to the end.

In the first period, sharp-shooting Joe Mies, a 6-1, 165-pound guard who has led the Chiefs throughout most of the season, again was cast in a star's role. Mies paced the Chiefs to a 17-12 advantage, tossing in 10 of his game-high 28 points in the opening period.

But, let's go back.

The Chiefs had engineered a 10-4 lead in the early going of the duel and it certainly didn't look good for the visitors. But the Mustangs kept close, as all five starters scored.

Canton kept building the lead, finally reaching its apex at 29-16 at the 3:17 mark when 5-10, 145-pound guard Tyrone Reeves hit a finger roll lay-up. That was the last points, however, they would score for the next seven minutes as the Mustangs came alive. Center

Hinds and Steve Grant rallied Northville, scoring four and three points, respectively.

At halftime, Northville had cut the deficit to 29-23.

The comeback continued into the third quarter and Don Norton, a 6-2, 175 all-around cager, connected on a 3-point play to slash the Canton lead even further, 29-26, with 7:38 left. Northville finally took the lead at 30-29 on a Mike Hilfinger basket. But Canton regrouped when Mies drilled a long, arching jump shot that found its mark, tying the score at 31-all. From there until the third quarter buzzer, it was back-and-forth until the score stood at 39-39.

In the fourth quarter, it was a case of missed opportunities for Canton, which hit only two of seven free throws, three at crucial times. But so did Northville, whose 7-of-13 from the line kept Canton in the game until the end.

Norton and Hinds led the Mustangs with 20, while Mies had a 28 for Canton.

Northville advanced to the Wednesday semi-final round where the Mustangs met and trampled Novi, 77-66, to qualify for the championship round.

John Jensen
Outstanding

"The new league is one of the toughest."

Jensen captures 2 golds at swim championships

Westland John Glenn's outstanding swimmer, John Jensen, captured a pair of gold medals at the Western-Lakes Conference Swimming & Diving Championships conducted last week.

Jensen turned in the winning time for the 200-yard individual medley when he touched in at 2:00.57. He also chalked up the gold for the 500-yard freestyle as he churned a 4:48.05.

Jensen's time for the individual medley tied the league record set by Farmington's Alec Campbell in 1983. His performance for the 500 established a new league record, breaking the mark set by Harrison's Mark Raditz in 1985. Both times also bettered the existing school records. The individual medley had been in Jensen's possession and the old 500 freestyle record of 4:52.7 was set in 1984 by Brian Pawlowicz.

"The new league we're in is the toughest I've seen," said Larry McConnell, Glenn coach. "And the tougher competition has been a catalyst for helping Jensen better his times."

Mark Winefrey, assistant coach who is a former Glenn swim star, has devoted a lot of hours refining Jensen's techniques.

"Improving the breaststroke has made him a better individual medley swimmer," Winefrey said. "He has a lot of potential."

Jensen also has qualified to compete in the state finals.

Romulus to join new SAC conference

Romulus will say "good-bye" to the Metro-West Athletic Conference and join the ranks of the South Central Conference as soon as athletic and scholastic commitments to the present league are completed, according to school officials.

"We have been notified that we have been accepted in the new league," said Lowell Johnson, Romulus High athletic director. "We are very pleased with the good news. The new league offers a bigger challenge for our students and athletes both academically as well as athletically."

Johnson pointed out "that because most schedules for games and activities are filled a year or two in advance, it will take time to faze out of the old league."

"We plan to begin volleyball and wrestling competition in the new league as soon as possible," Johnson said, "however, we officially won't be in the new league for a football and basketball until probably 1988."

Other South Central Conference schools include Ann Arbor Pioneer, Ann Arbor Huron, Ypsilanti, and Adrian.

Presently, Romulus competes in a conference that is made up of the two Taylor high schools - Truman and Central - and Oak Park.

Inkster crowns league cage champ

Sustaining but one setback during the 1986 campaign, C. W. Mungo emerged with the Inkster Parks and Recreation men's basketball league crown.

Trailing the champs, who finished with an impressive 8-1 won-lost record, was the Pony Express (7-2), followed by Sky Highs (2-7) and the Civic Arena Renegades (1-8).

However, the Pony Express rode back to capture the playoff title and, the right to represent the city at the Michigan Parks and Recreation's state playoffs.

The state playoffs will be conducted from April 4-6 with the City of Flint playing the role of host. In the meantime, C. W. Mungo will remain at home to entertain area teams for the Inter-City Invitational which is scheduled to get underway

March 24-27.

The Inter-City tournament will be played at the Inkster Recreation Complex, on Middlebelt Road, half mile north of Michigan Ave.

Attention Inkster softball managers

The Inkster Parks and Recreation Department is accepting team registrations for the 1986 softball season.

Managers or team representatives are urged to contact recreation officials if they play to field a men's Class 'A', women's or an 18-and-under softball team.

Recreation officials stress that there are also "open leagues", with no residency requirements, this season.

Organizational meetings will be conducted later this month. Those wishing further information should contact Rod Williams during regular business hours at 728-7530.

CAR CARE GUIDE

HELPFUL TIPS ON
DO-IT-YOURSELF
CAR
CARE

Be consistent in caring for your auto. Proper care means much longer wear!

Americans need to open that hood a little more often, according to auto experts.

Car care needs new priority, experts say

There never has been a time in the last four decades when the care of your car was more important than it is now, said the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association.

Here are the reasons:

- With about 70 percent of motorists pumping their own gasoline, the routine, but critical, checks performed by attendants at the full-service gas pumps are often overlooked.

- Intervals between oil changes and other maintenance procedures have been substantially boosted, points out the M.V.M.A. Example: Many manufacturers require an oil change only once in 10,000 miles. That's almost a year for many drivers. Prior to World War II, a petroleum refiner proudly advertised its product as the 2,000-mile oil.

- Average age of all cars on the road is at a three-decade peak of seven and a half years.

- The ratio of cars to mechanics has improved in the last few years but only to a point where it's estimated that there is now one repair person for every 165 cars in operation.

- Car population has quadrupled in 40 years. Heavier traffic means your car should be in tip-top condition to meet today's driving demands. That means good brakes, steering, tires and acceleration.

"Ironically, car manufacturers have made such tremendous strides in reducing owner maintenance responsibility that there is concern that such basic efforts as an oil change or replacing an air filter might be neglected," said John C. Scowcroft, director of contracts and special projects in the M.V.M.A. Technical Affairs Division.

Scowcroft points out that the recommendations can be different for two people driving identical cars.

"Most of use can drive 10,000 miles, or whatever the manufacturer recommends, on the same oil," he said. "But, that does not apply to the motorist who stays within the city limits and makes an occasional trip to the grocery or drug store. That type of owner needs to change the oil every six months, regardless of mileage.

"The same rule applies to the Texas rancher or the rural owner who sees a lot of dust in daily drives, long or short," Scowcroft said. "Also, if your car frequently is used to pull a trailer on vacation trips, drain the crankcase and pour in a fresh supply often. Change transmission fluid and filter more often, too."

Think twice about those brake shoes

You're cruising along at 40 mph. You spot the light at the intersection ahead turning red, so you let up on the gas pedal and slowly push down the brake – but nothing happens! You begin to pump the pedal furiously as the car slows and finally stops. . . just in time. Whew! That was lucky! But, you need a brake job – fast.

That is the introduction to the following article that appeared in a recent issue of New Driver magazine – the continuing guide to driver education and energy conservation:

If properly maintained, your car's brake system shouldn't fail. But, because it involves a number of parts subject to use, abuse and corrosion, it is possible for the system to give out. How do you keep it from failing? Let's start with the basics.

By understanding how the brake system works, you can help to keep your car's brakes in good working order and identify potential problems.

There are two types of brake system.

Drum brakes consist of a master cylinder – a reservoir for brake fluid – and a brake pedal, one or two wheel cylinders at each wheel, tubing that connects the master cylinder and wheel cylinders, brake shoes, brake drums and hydraulic brake fluid.

When you push down the brake pedal, it moves a piston in the master cylinder, forcing brake fluid out of the master cylinder under pressure through the brake lines and into the wheel cylinders. Then, equal pressure is applied to each wheel cylinder, where pistons force the brake shoes outward against the brake drums. Friction between the lining on the brake shoes and the brake drums slows or stops the car.

Disc brakes provide better stopping power than drum brakes. They don't lose their stopping ability after a series of hard stops as rapidly as drum brakes do and they aren't affected as much by wetness, dirt or dust. Disc brake systems are hydraulically operated, often with a power assist from a brake booster. Almost all new-car models include a braking system with disc brakes on the front, where most of the braking action takes place and drum brakes on the rear wheels.

The disc brake system operates in a similar way to a drum brake system, except that calipers, disc brake pads and rotors replace brake shoes and brake drums. A rotor is a flat circle disc that rotates with the wheel; the caliper holds the disc brake pads that press against the rotor when the brake pedal is pushed, similar to the action of handbrakes on a bicycle.

By simply pushing down the brake pedal, the driver can feel, sense and judge whether the car is stopping normally and properly. The most common brake problem is brake-lining wear. To check for wear, push the pedal down. If it goes more than halfway to the floor, there is excessive wear of the linings.

Another problem is air in the brake system. The pedal should make a firm stop. Any sponginess indicates that there is unwanted air in the brake system, and a procedure known as "bleeding" is required to remove the air. Push the pedal down hard and count to 10. If the pedal keeps moving toward the floorboard, there may be air in the system, or there may be trouble in the master cylinder.

After 20,000 miles, hydraulic brake fluid leakage at the wheel cylinders or at brake line connections is common. It's important to check the system regularly, especially the rubber components that can be damaged by leaking brake fluid (incidentally, brake fluid can also ruin the car's paint job – wipe up splashes as quickly as possible). If one cylinder is leaking, check the entire system – it has had the same usage over the same period of time.

Other common drum brake problems include the following: uneven pressures on lining wear at one or more wheels, causing the vehicle to pull to one side; grabbing brakes; soft or hard pedal feel; and brakes failing to release.

Disc brake systems use much higher hydraulic pressures than conventional drum brake systems. This makes brake fluid leakage a major problem on older cars with disc brakes (they were introduced around 1965 as standard production items).

Disc brake problems often involve noise, roughness and chatter. One noisy symptom is harmless, though. If a groaning noise is apparent when the brakes are lightly applied and the car is rolling, it's harmless – though annoying – and doesn't affect operation. Simply change the pedal pressure to eliminate the noise.

The most common disc brake problems are chatter and uneven grabbing action, with the vehicle pulling to one side. The most serious – and most audible – problem is a high-pitched squeal while the car is rolling and the brakes are not applied. This signals that the brake pads are completely worn and are in the process of damaging the expensive-to-replace rotors. Some of the newer cars have disc pad sensors that audibly indicate when the pad thickness is less than an acceptable minimum.

The entire brake system should be checked at least once a year or every 12,000 to 15,000 miles. Every 10 months or 10,000 to 20,000 miles, a wheel should be pulled from the front of the car to check the condition of the pads and rotors. Pads should be checked for remaining thickness; rotors should be checked for warpage, heat checking and cracking. If any one wheel of the car needs repair, check all four wheels.

For do-it-yourselfers, a number of kits with step-by-step instructions for replacement of either drum or disc brakes are available from auto parts outlets. Disc brake pads are easier to replace than drum brakes shoes and linings, but it's very important to keep disc brake rotors and brake pads completely free of grease, dirt and hydraulic brake fluid.

In addition to the checks of the components listed above, the fluid level in the master cylinder should be checked at least every 5,000 miles.

Be careful when checking both disc and drum brakes after the car has been driven. Braking depends on friction and heat dissipation, and the brake rotors and drums will be extremely hot.

How you use the brakes can affect their condition. Anticipating stops can reduce the excessive lining wear created by sudden stops. Riding the brakes – keeping one foot on the pedal while the car is moving – also contributes to excessive wear on the system.

Brakes are crucial to the safe operation of a car; it never pays to take shortcuts when dealing with them. If you have any doubts about the condition of the braking system, or don't feel comfortable trying any of the tests listed above, see a professional mechanic. An investment in brake maintenance is an investment in safety.

Used plugs tell story

Worn or fouled plugs can dramatically affect acceleration.

This was demonstrated by Champion Spark Plug Company to simulate freeway merging and passing situations.

First, cars were tested at speeds from 25 to 55 mph with fresh plugs. Then the plugs were made to misfire in controlled degrees, and the runs were repeated.

With just a 10 percent misfire, it took 3.3 seconds longer to reach 55. With a 25 percent misfire, it took nearly 10 seconds longer than with fresh plugs. That's over half again as long!

And here's something most people don't stop to think about: Just one misfiring plug in a four-cylinder engine can cause over twice the power loss of a misfiring plug in a V-8.

This power loss, especially when it is sudden and unexpected, can be risky business in freeway driving.

In addition, misfire can cause an appreciable drop in fuel economy.

So, keep those engines properly tuned. Not only for peak, dependable performance – but for economical driving, as well.

Americans are expected to do more weekend and vacation driving this year, resuming a trend of greater recreational motoring that was temporarily curtailed in recent years.

Annual surveys by Champion Spark Plug Company have found that the percentage of annual mileage devoted to pleasure or vacation driving has increased from 16 percent in 1980 to approximately 20 percent today.

David Walker, Champion director of automotive technical services, explained that with continued improvement in the general economy, and a reduction in the cost of gasoline in many parts of the nation, recreational motoring should increase this summer.

"But millions of motorists, seeking relaxation and pleasure on the nation's roadways, will find delay and frustration instead," Walker said.

Another Champion survey in recent years found that nearly 7 percent of car owners experienced mechanical problems with their vehicles, which interrupted their recreational trips. Projecting this figure, 5.8 million families had their vacations in that year cut short or impeded by car failures en route.

"These statistics indicate that the prudent car owner should invest in a tune-up and other regular maintenance prior to setting out on a lengthy trip," Walker said.

"Taking a chance on an ill-prepared vehicle may leave the family stranded on a roadside, or require motorists to pay large and unexpected repair bills while away from home."

"Cars should be maintained regularly, and it's wise to schedule this care just before a vacation, particularly since the vehicle has come through a season of cold and wet weather, which normally leads to some deterioration in automotive performance."

The survey provided some clues as to why mechanical failures occur on vacations. Only 47 percent of the respondents said they regularly have engine tune-ups prior to leaving on extended journeys. Even though 97 percent indicated that they check the oil before leaving, 20 percent fail to check safety items such as brakes, lights and wipers; one out of three do not check their cooling systems before departing.

Another factor is that the U.S. car population is growing older. The old vehicles require more care, especially when they are expected to carry their passengers on extended trips," Walker said.

"The best insurance to make your warm-weather trip produce pleasure, not stress, is to have the vehicle checked, tuned and serviced before departing."

Don't let wipers streak your driving

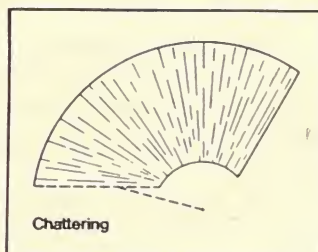

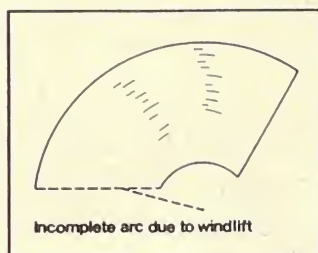

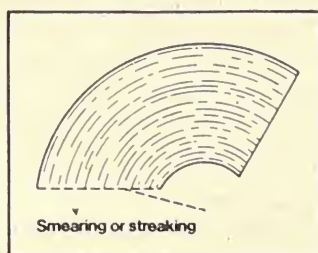

When you hear the words "permanent set," what do you think of? An hair conditioning agent . . . a new miracle glue?

Perhaps, but there are other possibilities. Permanent set is also a condition that affects your car's windshield wipers, causing them to streak, "chatter," make noise and generally lose their ability to clean the window properly.

"Permanent set is one of the major factors that can cut the useful life of windshield wipers," said Larry Koles, assistant director of automotive technical services for Anco, a windshield wiper manufacturer.

Permanent set is a result of the hardening of the rubber in wipers, Koles explained. While the wipers are resting on the windshield, the rubber wiping lip is bent over by the wiper arm spring pressure. Over an extended period of time, they will harden and take a "set." When this occurs, they can no longer flip over when the blade reverses, and wipe quality deteriorates. It is similar to a garden hose that has been coiled for a while and resists being straightened.

To combat permanent set, Anco, like other wiper manufacturers, selects rubber compounds specially formulated to be resilient, so the wiper elements will bounce back and not permanent set too quickly. However, it cannot be avoided completely. Once permanent set has occurred, it cannot be corrected. The wiper must be replaced, Koles said.

Check that battery for signs of aging

If your present battery is more than four years old and showing signs of weakness, such as an engine that cranks slowly or dimming headlights, it may be time to shop for a replacement before you get stranded, said the Automotive Information Council.

Ninety degrees is the temperature at which both battery and engine will perform at 100 percent efficiency. As the temperature falls, battery power is reduced and the engine requires more power to help it start. The heaviest demand made of a battery occurs during starting.

Batteries come in many shapes and sizes, and it's important to replace your car's battery with the proper size and voltage. Battery sizes are indicated by numbers often followed by one or more letters. These codes indicate the actual battery exterior size as well as voltage and terminal position. Codes are found on the battery's label.

Before you buy, you'll also need to determine how much battery power your car requires. This is indicated by cold cranking amps (CCA). The determine CCA, all you need is your car's engine displacement size (CID). If you don't know, check your owner's manual. A car needs a battery with at least as high a CCA rating as its engine displacement, but not less than 250 CCA. For example, a 95 CID engine requires a battery rated no less than 250 CCA; a 400 CID engine requires a battery rated at least 400 CCA. Remember that the climate you drive in, how you drive and vehicle equipment all influence your CCA requirements.

If you have any doubts about replacing a battery, have it checked now. It could save you a time-consuming and expensive road service call.

'Tis pothole season

Spring thaws mean potholes, and potholes mean drivers should pay increased attention to front-end alignment, tire inflation and wheel balance on their cars, said the Automotive Information Council.

The rising and falling temperatures of spring play havoc with road surfaces. The water from thawing ice and snow seeps into cracks in the pavement, freezes again as the temperature falls, then lifts and crumbles road surfaces. A pothole is born.

Fortunately, the suspension systems on newer autos are engineered to withstand the punishment associated with most pothole encounters. Cars today are designed to stay within alignment specifications unless a structural member, such as a steering linkage or control arm, is bent or twisted.

The first clue of a problem is when your car handles differently or tends to drift to one side when traveling down a straight, level highway. Yet, the most common reason for this abnormal handling isn't alignment problems; it's under-inflated tires. Be sure to inflate tires to their correct pressure; this simple step could very easily solve your car handling difficulties.

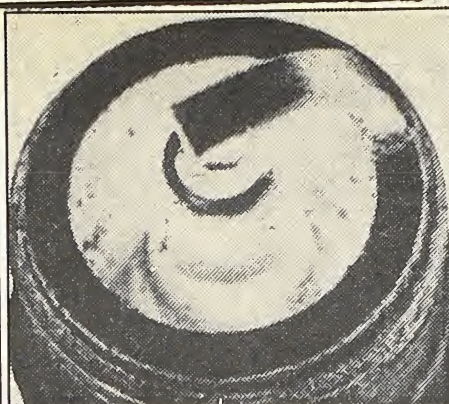

Another possible reason for handling problems is wheels that are out of balance. A wheel weight can be jarred loose if a pothole is hit hard enough. A quick visual inspection will provide the answer, because a lost wheel weight will leave a mark on the spot of the wheel where it was attached.

Unbalanced or bent wheels caused by impact with a deep pothole can also cause shimmy and vibrations in the front wheels. Be certain to inspect wheel before having other work done.

A front end alignment is a relatively inexpensive auto repair and can save the cost of new tires.

If the tire pressure and wheel check out OK, and you are still experiencing handling difficulties, have the car checked as soon as possible for misalignment. A misalignment of the front end will cause the tires to wear out quickly. Excessive wear on one side of the tire is evidence of misalignment. A front-end alignment is a relatively inexpensive auto repair and can save the cost of new tires.

OIL DEPOSITS - Symptom is an oily coating caused by oil leaking past worn valve guides or piston rings into combustion chamber.

NORMAL LOOK - By way of contrast, a normal spark plug is characterized by brown to grayish coloration and slight wear of the center and side electrodes.
